OFFICIAL INVITATION TO G20 AFRICA INFRASTRUCTURE INVESTMENT CONFERENCE
Millennium Hotel, Mayfair, London, JULY 17 – 19, 2013 www.corporate-afrioca.com

Under the patronage of the Honorable Yayi Boni, President of the African Union, African Development Bank, and Counseil des Investisseurs Français en Afrique (CIAN).

Dear Ms. Ingraham,

I write on behalf of the Organizers, Times Publications and Dr Derek Payne, Chairman of Corporate Africa, to officially invite you to the III G20 Africa Infrastructure Investment Conference, and request your participation therein. The Conference will be hosted under the patronage of the Honorable Yayi Boni, President of the African Union, African Development Bank, and Counseil des Investisseurs Français en Afrique (CIAN).

In addition to looking at investments and project finance to bridge gaps in primary infrastructure across Africa's regional economic communities, the event will also bring commercial and political leaders and their councils from the municipalities and regions of Africa to engage leading investors to focus on new partnerships for development, influenced by new industry players, their technologies, increasing urbanization across Africa, and the movement of economic power from European controlled nations to economies in the East. They will participate in high level consultations and panel discussions about opportunities in their industries and markets to new responsive investors from Brazil and Russia; and also India and China and other G20 nations. Investment opportunities will be in line with infrastructure currently on the agenda of the African Development Bank for the regions of Africa; mainly Oil and Gas, Agriculture, Mining, Electric Power, Water and Sewage, Transport, and Building Construction. Key investors in attendance have strong specialization in areas of infrastructure and will respond to opportunities which match their experiences, technology, and resources.

The Conference will be structured in four parts, each targeting a BRIC economy and their relations with infrastructure development inside Africa. This will take place in workshops, plenary sessions, and panels. South Africa, which is part of the BRICS Group will be common in all areas like other African nations. BRICS investors will engage local and national governments of Africa about infrastructure needs and capabilities and share their experiences with them with a view to creating win-win collaborations and partnerships to build capacity in these areas. Other areas covered will include major infrastructure projects across Africa including the building of cities by Russia's Renaissance Capital, and the BRICS Bank planned to be launched in 2013.

African nations including Nigeria, Ghana, South Africa, and Kenya will lead national delegations comprising of members of the private and public sectors. The Organizers are now inviting your company to participate and to register your attendance as soon as possible. Four of the BRICS economies are the fastest growing countries in the world and Africa possesses more capacity for growth and development than any other region in the world. We look forward to welcoming you to the III G20 Africa Infrastructure Investment Conference next July.
